In general, Federal law requires that a parent/guardian or eligible student (as defined under FERPA) provide written consent before a school or school district may disclose personally identifiable information from the education records of a student including personally identifiable information from the National School Lunch Program (NSLP) school meal application maintained by a school, school district, or a party acting on their behalf, to a third party.*

About the Emergency Broadband Benefit Program (EBB Program)

The FCC’s EBB Program is a temporary federal program to help eligible households pay for internet service during the pandemic. Households with a child who is approved to receive free or reduced price meals under the NSLP or the School Breakfast Program (SBP), including children who attend schools participating in the U.S. Department of Agriculture’s Community Eligibility Provision (CEP), are eligible for the EBB Program. This includes any child who currently receives benefits during the 2020-2021 school year or did so in the 2019-2020 school year. USAC administers the EBB Program under the direction of the FCC. Visit GetEmergencyBroadband.org for more information.

Purpose of this form

Signing this form will allow your child, or your, school or school district to let a participating internet provider, the FCC, and USAC know if your child has, or you have, been approved to receive NSLP or SBP free or reduced price school meals and thus if your household is eligible for the EBB Program. You do not have to sign this form, but if you do not, the school or school district cannot disclose the listed information to a participating provider, the FCC, or USAC. You may still participate in the EBB Program by providing information directly to the participating provider, the FCC, or USAC. You can find more information about applying for the EBB Program at GetEmergencyBroadband.org.

*The Family Educational Rights and Privacy Act (FERPA) (20 U.S.C. § 1232g; 34 CFR Part 99) requires written consent before an educational agency (e.g., school district) or institution (i.e., school) may disclose personally identifiable information from the education records of a student to a third party, unless an exception to FERPA's general consent requirement applies. Private K-12 schools that do not receive federal funds from a program administered by the U.S. Department of Education are not subject to FERPA.

The National School Lunch Act (NSLA) has confidentiality and disclosure requirements (42 U.S.C. 1758(b)(6); 7 CFR Part 245.6) that explain the restrictions on the disclosure and use of information obtained from an application for free or reduced price meal benefits, as well as the criminal penalties for improper release of information. The confidentiality of the information on the school meals application includes the free or reduced price eligibility status of the student and the household's income information.

Under FERPA, an eligible student means a student who is 18 years of age or older or attends an institution of postsecondary education. In general, under FERPA, an eligible student would need to give written permission for a school or school district to disclose personally identifiable information from their education records. Under the NSLA's confidentiality provisions, the parent or guardian of an eligible student must also give written permission for a school to give someone else information about the eligible student qualifying for free or reduced price school meals, if the eligible student qualified using the parent or guardian's household and income information.

A parent, guardian, or eligible student may revoke his or her or their written permission for a school or school district to disclose personally identifiable information from education records at any time. A request to revoke permission should be in writing, signed, and sent separately to Kristen Kivela.
